IPCC Code Red

The latest report by the Intergovernmental Panel for Climate Change (IPCC) was issued on 9 August. UN chief, Antonio Guterres said the report meant “a code red for humanity.”

Ever experience Climate Despair? Here's why that's a climate action in itself!

What is the Collective for Climate Action?

We are a self-organised initiative of public sector staff brought together by a shared concern about climate breakdown. We've come together to elevate the profile of the planet and climate change, throughout the work of government. So far we have around 500 people in the our Community,

Highlights From Engagement Week

Sam Pope reports on some great feedback from our engagement sessions.

At least half who attended have committed to basic pledges, with time being recorded as being the biggest barrier to doing more.

Check out #Growth and Engagement Channel on Slack for more detailed results.

We need you on the Cross Government Climate Hub (CGCH)

One of our strengths is the number of public sector bodies and staff that are now involved. It doesn't matter if you are part of a network already, please bring your community to the CGCH and share our Linktree link with anyone wanting to collaborate and act on climate. We can do more if we can easily share what we are doing.

What to check out

- The UK Schools Sustainability Network (UKSSN) have pulled together some of the best education groups about climate. This video showcases some of their work, and they are hoping to share it as widely as possible at inset days for teachers across the country. Please share with those you know involved in the Education sector (not just Geography teachers!).
- The Cadence Roundtable is a confidential and supportive space for anyone in government or the voluntary or private sector, who sees the need to prepare society for environmental breakdown. The Roundtable offers much needed peer-support for your well-being, for your professional practice, and for the change you can lead. Find out more and complete an anonymous survey to find how Cadence can help you.
